PORTFOLIO REVIEW

The Canadian universe bond market was up 0.4% in the quarter, bringing the year-to-date return to 8.0%. Interest rates on government bonds stayed in a very narrow trading range while corporate and provincial bond yields declined as investors continued to seek higher yields given the impact of lower policy rates and historical levels of quantitative easing. The yield curve steepened, with longer-term bonds underperforming, incorporating some of the improving economic outlook and rising inflation expectations. The short end of the yield curve remained anchored by the Bank of Canada's stated intention to keep policy rates very low for a number of years.

The bond portfolio continues to outperform its FTSE Universe benchmark, providing value-add returns for the quarter and year-to-date. The allocation to corporate bonds and their outperformance relative to federal government bonds, as well as exposure to higher-yielding provincial bonds, were the main positive contributors. In addition, our inflation-linked bond holdings outperformed nominal bonds as inflation expectations rose over the period. The supply of corporate bonds remains robust with levels running over 20% higher than last year as corporations look to lock in historically low interest costs.

STRATEGY & INVESTMENT
OUTLOOK

The outlook for financial markets is positive as we believe the economic recovery is self-sustaining, and there is significant visibility that the monetary and fiscal policy will remain stimulative. Of course, this is with the current "normal" caveats that the virus does not take a more troubling path and that there will be a vaccine available in the first half of next year. We are optimistic that human ingenuity will prevail.

We have seen in previous periods the danger of extrapolating temporary trends on a more permanent basis, both to the positive and negative. In this context, we find now more than ever that the case for an active approach to security selection will be invaluable. Longer term, we remain steadfast in our conviction that a well selected portfolio of higher quality sustainable businesses will deliver attractive long-term returns for clients.
