PORTFOLIO REVIEW

During the quarter, the Canadian bond market increased 0.6%, registering a more modest return for the quarter but a solid 8.7% gain for the year. Corporate and provincial bonds continued to outperform their federal counterparts. The improving economic prospects raised risk appetites, as did the negative real yields on the highest quality bonds around the world. In general, interest rates rose in the quarter although the increases were concentrated in longer maturities as central banks continue to anchor short rates at very low levels. Within the corporate sector, the strongest returns came from past laggards, as shown by the outperformance of energy and real estate companies. The more defensive names trailed the broader market, in particular corporate bonds of utility and telecommunications companies.

The NBI Select Income Fund outperformed its respective benchmark for the quarter, and ended the year with a strong performance relative to the benchmark. The higher allocation to corporate and provincial bonds was the major contributor to the strong value-add. Individual security selection and the allocation to Real Return bonds also contributed positively to the relative performance, as did the slightly smaller exposure to interest rate risk.

STRATEGY & INVESTMENT
OUTLOOK

The outlook for financial markets is positive as we believe the economic recovery is self-sustaining, and there is significant visibility that the monetary and fiscal policy will remain stimulative. Of course, this is with the current “normal” caveats that the virus does not take a more troubling path and that there will be a vaccine available in the first half of next year. We are optimistic that human ingenuity will prevail.

We have seen in previous periods the danger of extrapolating temporary trends on a more permanent basis, both to the positive and negative. In this context, we find now more than ever that the case for an active approach to security selection will be invaluable. Longer term, we remain steadfast in our conviction that a well selected portfolio of higher quality sustainable businesses will deliver attractive long-term returns for clients.
